MARKET UPDATE

USA & AUS Almonds - In the US, supply of large sized Nonpareil are extremely tight. With full European pipelines and lost demand in China, it is unlikely that California will break shipment records this year. In Australia, NP and Carmel sizing should be similar to the sizing seen this last season. They just need dry weather now to have a good crop. The recent heavy rains in Vic and SA have only effected some parts and farms without significant losses compared to the overall crop size.

Psyllium Husk - Last year's crop was 2.70 million bags, which was considered very good but demand also increased and prices moved to historic highs. The new 2022 crop will be harvested End of February/Beginning of March and is currently looking even larger, however any rain between now and harvest could change this situation quickly.

Sesame Seeds - The Sesame market is currently stable after the earlier price increases but is likely to firm further if there is any increase in current levels of demand.

Australian Pecans - Due to pecan supply being down across the world the Australian product is very attractive. Pecan sales have been brisk for both our conventional and Organic grades. Feedback on our quality has been excellent.
